Art Unit: 2816

1. The amendment filed on 1/10/05 has been received and entered in the case. In view of newly discovered prior art now applied against the claims, this office action is non-final. Any inconvenience caused by the delay in citing this new prior art is regretted.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-6 and 9-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by either Kizaki or Bangs et al.

In Kazaki, note Fig. 2, where the recited input signals are Vin and Vinx; the recited conversion circuit reads on the combination of FETs 11, 12, 13, 23 and 42; and the recited detection circuit reads on circuit 3.

In Bangs et al, note Fig. 1, where the recited input signals are in+ and in-; the recited conversion circuit reads on the combination of circuits 3 and 5; and the recited detection circuit reads on the combination of circuits 15 and 17.

Also note that the recitation of the plural input signals having different center amplitude levels will read on the circuit operation when different level signals are applied at different times (i.e., sequentially input to the circuits of the two references). In addition, note that the recitation of the plural receiving (or conversion) circuits reads on the plural differential transistors that receive respective signals of the input differential signals. Thus, all of claims 1-6 and 9-15 are fully anticipated by the two references.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bangs et al.

The use of plural current sources, as a mechanism for changing the tail current of the conversion circuit, would have been obvious to any person having ordinary skill in the art because this is an old and well-known way of providing a variable tail current (of which fact official notice is taken).

4. Claim 8 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Each of the remaining references on the attached PTO-892 form is also seen to anticipate at least the independent claims in their current form.

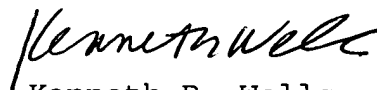

6. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Kenneth B. Wells whose telephone number is (571)272-1757. The examiner can normally be reached on Monday through Friday from 8:30am to 5:00pm.
